Concentrations for the Sociology Major

Sociology majors have the option of selecting one of the following concentrations in consultation with a faculty advisor. A concentration consists of a total of twelve units (four courses) of interrelated topics, of which one course is required and nine units are electives selected from the courses listed within each concentration.

Sociology majors are not required to select a concentration. However, if they chose to do so, they must declare their concentration formally by filling out the appropriate section of the “Undergraduate change of Objective” form and submitting it to the Admissions and Records office (LH-114).
